Wrapping up the Year

Atlanta, GA - We're wrapping up the 2016 author series and getting ready for a big year in 2017. Here's what we've got lined up.

Friday, November 18. (7:00 pm). #Election2016 What Happened?

A panel discussion in partnership with the James Weldon Johnson Institute at Emory University.

Moderated by JWJI Director Andra Gillespie, an associate professor of political science at Emory, the panel features leading public opinion scholars who were on the front lines of survey research in this election cycle. Panelists include:

- Dr. Vincent Hutchings (University of Michigan), Professor of Political Science and Co-Principal Investigator of the American National Election Study;
- Dr. Adrian Pantoja (Pitzer College), Professor of Political Science and Senior Analyst with Latino Decisions, the largest polling firm specializing in Latino/a public opinion research. Dr. Pantoja fielded the weekly tracking polls among Latino voters, which were co-sponsored by Telemundo; and
- Dr. Janelle Wong (University of Maryland), Director of the Asian American Studies Center and Co-Principal Investigator of the National Asian American Political Survey.

The discussion during this dialogue will focus on the electoral outcome, minority voting behavior and the limitations of polls and predictive models during this election.
